

Berlin Thinks New Drive Will Be Big Factor for Peace

Kaiser Depends Upon Bulgaria and Expects To Crush Serbia, Stretching From Baltic to Bosphorus

ROUMANIA MAY ALSO JOIN GERMANS

WAR NEWS OF ONE YEAR AGO TODAY

Paris reports that German armies in France are unable to advance. Berlin reports same concerning French and British armies.

St. Petersburg says Austrian losses in Galicia campaign total 350,000 men. All roads are declared blocked by abandoned commissariat trains.

The Austrian government has sent additional troops to the Italian border because of nationalist demonstrations throughout Italy.

Berlin Sept. 18.—A mighty blow in the Balkans may end the war before spring. By placing a road through Serbia and Bulgaria, the Austro-German armies may settle not only the Balkan question, but bring an early peace. Both here and in Vienna the idea of a sudden stroke in the Balkans meets with popular approval.

Military men here agree it would be comparatively easy to defeat Serbia. A short march through the northeastern part of Serbia would link up the central empire with Bulgaria, already very friendly in her relations with Turkey, Austria and Germany.

If Bulgaria fights at all it is certain she will fight with the central empire with the strongest and best equipped army in the Balkans. Her entrance would complete a great chain of armies stretching from the Baltic to the Bosphorus, invincible in power.

Important negotiations are going on with Roumania, it is understood, but reports in English newspapers that Roumania would enter the war on the side of the allies has caused no concern.

The allies apparently have lost their chance of winning Bulgaria. Bulgaria is still dicker for a slice of Grecian Macedonia, but Greece seems to have no intention of giving up this territory. The Bulgarians are so satisfied with the concessions granted by Turkey that it is doubtful now if they would join the allies even if at the eleventh hour all their requests would be granted.

Bulgaria is anxious to play the diplomatic game as long as possible for the largest possible return. The whole Balkan situation may be summed up in the statement, "If one acts all will fail."

Petrograd Reports Successes in the Southeast to Offset German Victories in Vicinity of Orany.

(By United Press)
Petrograd, Sept. 18.—A violent battle for Vilna has begun. The Germans are attacking a great force east of the city. Several enemy detachments have reached the railway and are attempting to pierce the Russian line.

The official statement from the war office today emphasizes the fact that the fighting around Vilna is the greatest struggle now going on along the Baltic to Galicia battle line. It is not probable that the Czar will order the evacuation of the city within a few days if the enemy's attacks threaten the envelopment of the armies in that region.

German successes in this fighting and in the region southeast of Orany are offset by Russian victories in the southwest. The troops of General Ivanhoff have captured about 3500 prisoners and have occupied three villages, the Austro-Germans at some points fleeing in disorder.

FINALS OF GOLF TOURNEY AT COUNTRY CLUB TODAY

Miss Dyer and Mrs. Shillingford are to Play for Club Cup

The semi-finals of the ladies golf tournament were played off yesterday afternoon. Miss Kathrine Dyer, of Curwensville defeated Mrs. Philip Reed, score 3 up and 2 to go. Mrs. Shillingford defeated Miss Marion Bigler, score 5 up. The finals will be played today between Miss Dyer and Mrs. Shillingford.

There were 10 entries for the tournament, the others being Mrs. J. K. Horton, Miss Amelia Bigler, Mrs. A. L. Moore, Mrs. Don Gingery, Mrs. Douglass and Mrs. W. C. Miller.

Great interest has been shown in this tournament as well as in the game in general. Prof. Anderson, of Lock Haven, a professional golf player, watched the tournament yesterday and remarked that Clearfield had a very fine club and that there were possibilities to improve the links so as to make them one of the finest in Central Pennsylvania.

Mr. Anderson has been secured to give lessons in the game and he has great hopes of turning out some star players. He is booked for every Friday until the close of the season.

GERMAN SYSTEM OF ESPIONAGE FINDS MATCH IS ENGLAND

Ten Secret Workers of Kaiser Bagged By Scotland Yard's Efficient Counter

British Authorities Subject All Aliens to Searching Inquiry, Not Lessening Ordeal for Americans (U.S.)

BY WILBUR S. FORREST.
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

London Sept. 6.—(By Mail.)—The admittedly thorough and efficient German spy system is up against a most thorough and efficient stump in England.

One of the unhealthiest obstacles for agents of the enemy's intelligence department is the anti-spy section of Scotland Yard.

Official reports, just issued, show that ten alleged spies of various nationalities, all of whom were declared to be working for Germany, were bagged before any one of them had been in England three weeks. Four readily confessed.

This list, however, represents but a fractional part of the most recent fruits of the British dragnet. On two occasions, it is unofficially declared, the authorities in London cleverly maneuvered to round up dozens of spies who had been operating in London in the guise of British army officers. The method was as simple as it was effective. The war office is said to have informed all army officers in the metropolitan area to refrain on a certain date from traveling on any trains of the great system of underground railways of the metropolis. The order was strictly obeyed. Every officers' uniform that boarded an underground train that day contained a spy. The spy bag was full that night.

Several days later, the war office is said to have repeated its warning, this time instructing officers to keep off the motorbuses that travel by hundreds on London's busiest streets. The result was similar. The spy bag was filled again.

But this is only one of the many methods through which spies are caught in England. Another is chemistry. It was chemistry that told the British authorities that what appears to be an American passport is not always the real article. A government chemist informed the authorities that the great and powerful red seal of the American state department had been forged by the enemy; that the secretary of state's signature had been photographed from a genuine American passport in Germany and applied to a spurious document carried later by a spy in England. It was the chemist's proof, linked with other features that followed, that caused the spy to confess that he was furnished the forgery to obtain military secrets in England.

This forgery is today in the hands of the British authorities for comparison with other suspicious looking documents bearing the seal of the United States.

Americans traveling through England to or from continental countries will henceforth be subjected to the most thorough examination and surveillance by the British authorities.

American passports in England, in future, if there is the least doubt of their validity, must bear the tests of the government chemists.

"Americans must not feel ill toward the British authorities if necessary precautions are taken to prevent the use of spurious American passports in this country," said a high official of the war office to the United Press. "They must realize that Germany is not above forging the official seal of the American state department and has, perhaps, forged scores of these documents in an attempt to safe-conduct their spies into England and other belligerent countries. Every American citizen entering England in future must come with a clean bill of health easily proven and above all, with a passport that will defy the analysis of our chemists."

Scotland Yard is assisted in "spy-sleuthing" by all branches of the government and even by the boy scouts and girl scouts.

A striking case of spy detection originated in the general post office where a girl censor had a pronunciation that a certain letter she was reading was "not just right." She handed it over for inspection. A chemical test brought to light writing between the lines of the apparently harmless letter and the trap was set for the spy. He fell into it a few days later. He was tried and convicted and was executed in London Tower.

A loyal Britisher and his wife from Northern Yorkshire decided to spend a week-end at Torquay, a little watering place near Plymouth on the English southwest. They were "caught" by a boy scout taking a few harmless snapshots of the water-front. The scout reported the incident to the authorities. The Yorkshireman and his wife were immediately arrested. They were proved innocent of spying, without a doubt, but they paid $250 fine as a warning to other "amateur photographers."

The girl scouts serve in the same capacity as the boys. They are helping to make England an unhealthy place for spies.

A RED COURT HOUSE NOT ON YOUR TAX RECEIPT

The Sent of Justice Will be a Modest Buff and Olive, Thank You

Buff and olive! No, it isn't a game. That's the color the court house is going to be when the painters get through with it. Buff walls, and olive-green trimmings.

Red? Never! The young ladies who grace the court house offices would not stand for it. When red was proposed they held a conference and collectively sat upon the idea. The ideal!

Nobody knows just exactly why red was so strongly opposed. It has been suggested that the color didn't match the season's fashions in complexion, or that it didn't give well with the verdant colors in a chintz dress. Whatever it was—and it might have been just "because"—the court house is to be buff and olive.

To The Republican Voters:

I have endeavored to see as many of you as possible. Since entering the campaign for Prothonotary I have worked night and day to meet fact to face the voters of my party. Those of you whom I have met and talked with are in a position to personally pass upon my fitness for the office.

To those of you whom I have not met I desire to say this one more word. I am a native of Clearfield county, as are my parents and grandparents. Our family is one of the older Republican families of the county. I have always been a Republican. I am a graduate of the Clearfield public schools, and have had four years of special work in technical schools. This special work especially qualifies me for the work of the office to which I aspire. I have been employed in the offices of one of the largest manufacturing concerns in this country—in the world in fact.

If you nominate and elect me as Prothonotary of your county I pledge myself absolutely to my platform of One Term for One Man. I will neither ask for nor accept a second term. At the expiration of my term of office I will cheerfully aid some other deserving man to the office.

I hope to have your support. If nominated I will make the same vigorous contest for the election, and after my election will consider it a duty as well as a privilege to assist my party in every way in my power.

If you believe in the second term idea and one man having it all, you will vote for my opponent. If you believe in the One Term for One Man idea, and the passing of the office around I hope you will vote for me.

I respectfully submit my case to your consideration.

J. M. GALLAHER
Republican Candidate for Prothonotary.

Four, eight twelve years from now—it may be you or it may be your son who asks for the office of Prothonotary. The One Term for One Man established now will work to your, or his, benefit. adv.

Trade Tours Talked About In the Presence of Places Visited

Kindly Feeling Toward Trade Boosters Is Evidenced-- Mild Criticism of the Cherry Tree Fiasco

"BUY IT AT HOME" IS WELL RECEIVED

There never was a doubt that Clearfield county welcome to the business men of Clearfield on their tour last week was extremely friendly, but if there had been the expressions contained in current issues of the county newspapers would quickly dispel it.

A rift in the lute is discovered in the neighborhood of Burnside where the Burnside correspondent of the Mahaffey Times finds cause for criticism in the fact that the tourists went to Cherry Tree for their dinner instead of going to some town which doesn't divide the honor of its being between two counties. Burnside felt that the party could have been entertained in Burnside—as well it might have been had the makers of the schedule not thought that better time could be made by going through to Cherry Tree.

McGees Mills also objects to the Cherry Tree dinner party. (It is no longer a secret that the objection is shared by every member of the party who munched the rump and sturgeon served by mine host of the Cherry Tree Inn.) McGees believes that consistency is a whole set of jewelry, and pertinently asks why Clearfield home-trade boosters should find it necessary to go out of the county for a meal.

La Jose was somewhat facetiously inclined, and they saw only the stir among school children which the visit of the boosters caused. La Jose is right about the stir. There was a stir. Later La Jose will see just where the real stir occurred.

Madera expresses her welcome, through the "Herald" which took account of the visit of the business men. Thus the Coalport "Standard":

"Sixty-four of the representative business men of Clearfield stepped in Coalport a short time last Thursday evening on their 'get acquainted' tour of the county. They took supper at the Central. After supper they renewed or got acquainted with some of our business men, and we venture to say should they come again they would meet with a hearty welcome, as they were a mighty fine bunch of gentlemen."

Curwensville, through the "Herald" devotes a good half-column to the visit of the boosters, as follows:

"On September 9 and 10 a number of Clearfield merchants and professional men made tours throughout the county on what they termed a 'Get Together' campaign. The party traveled in automobiles and visited more than a score of towns, greeting the citizens and having an enjoyable time generally."

"Owing to delays the Clearfielders did not reach Curwensville until late Friday night and after taking supper at the hotels they returned to the county seat, well pleased with their experience. The object of the tour was to get acquainted with the people of the county and to show them what a good lot of men are in business in Clearfield."

"The tourists were not after trade, they aver, but to endeavor to induce the people to buy at home, whether it be in Clearfield or some other town in the county. It is likely that these get together tours will be made annual affairs."

The Mahaffey "Times" gives considerable space to the boosters, and takes occasion to express kindly criticism of some of the defects of the tour:

"The Clearfield Chamber of Commerce, represented by almost sixty persons, representing many lines of business, were in Mahaffey on Friday of last week. They arrived here at about 11:00 o'clock, and immediately began to get acquainted. Many of the visitors have souvenirs and printed matter for free distribution."

"From Mahaffey the visitors went to McGees and Burnside. They had arranged to take dinner at the Cherry Tree, but could not find accommodation there for everyone, so half of the party took lunch at La Jose, the remainder going on to Cherry Tree."

"The trade boomers received a warm welcome here, and it is announced that in the near future Mahaffey will gather up her collection of automobiles and make a trip to Clearfield. The motto of our visitors will probably be: 'What you can't buy in Clearfield, but in Mahaffey have the stores to back this up, at least on account of holiday.'

though some of them are a little shy about advertising.

"The only criticism heard here was in connection with the route. It would have been an easy matter to have arranged a stop here for dinner. Mahaffey has two good hotels. A Burnside correspondent also sets forth his views on the subjects in another column.

"These, however, are merely incidental. There were many delightful persons in the boosting party, and the 'keep your dollar at home' propaganda was doubtless strengthened by the visit. Our people need education along the line of sending their good dollars away to mail-order concerns."

STEFFENSON AND PARTY SAFE-WILL CONTINUE SEARCH

Noted Explorer, Thought to be Lost Heard From in the Far North Country

Is Now on Baillie Island and Has Provisions and Ample Outfit to Last Party Two Years.

(By United Press)
Ottawa, Sept. 18.—(The message came from Baillie Islands by way of Nome, Alaska, and said that Steffenson planned to continue his northern exploration and has provisions and ample outfit for two years.

The last heard from Steffenson previously was in April, 1914. With the destruction of his first ship the Karluk, greatest fears were felt for the explorer and he had all but been given up for lost.

Baillie Island where Steffenson is now safe and well is in the Arctic ocean at the mouth of the Mackenzie river. As the message refers to plans for further exploration, it is taken for granted that he was entirely unaware of the greatest apprehension for his safety.

Steffenson's expedition sailed in 1912 to discover new lands in the Arctic. A private cable from a member of the Steffenson party received in New York today, said they wintered at Banksland and all were safe.

Can you think of any argument in favor of the second term? adv.

ENGLISH SPEECH IN AMERICA.

The fuller reports of the discussion of the literacy test for voters in New York's constitutional convention show that the defeat of that proposition was due less to the practical politician's influence than to racial antagonisms excited by the issues of the European war. Such a test would have temporarily disfranchised thousands of foreign-born voters in the metropolis and for this reason both Republican and Democrats politicians opposed the change, but the accounts indicate that the measure would have been adopted but for anti-English feeling aroused by speakers who incautiously contended that if a literacy test in the English language were not provided "our Anglo-Saxon institutions and Anglo-Saxon civilization would be endangered."

After this, apparently, there was no hope, and a measure which was at first adopted by a vote of 70 to 61, was defeated by a vote of 77 to 67, owing, according to one account, to "the fatal weakness, in the opinion of the majority of the convention, of requiring that the voter should be able to read and write in English." One delegate declared that a literacy test in the English language would be an "insult" to a million residents of the metropolis. He stated, however, that he would accept a literacy test if the word "English" were stricken out, but did not say whether he preferred to substitute German or Yiddish. Doubtless Mr. Max Fast, had he been a delegate, would not have stopped short of an offered substitution, for, in speaking to the German-American society of Bergen County, N. J., recently, he asked pardon for "speaking in English" and a member recommended that he "say American language instead of English." Noting the curious fact that New York "could not fix upon a domestic policy of moment without fighting out the issues which divide Europe," the Springfield Republican pointedly remarks:

"What is the position in this country of the English language? It is the language of the federal constitution, the language of congress and every state legislature, the language of the courts, the language in which all laws, federal and state, are printed. It is the language in which all American literature has been written. It is the language of Washington and Lincoln, of the Farewell Address, the emancipation proclamation and the address at Gettysburg. It is the language of commerce and trade. It is the language of politics. It is the one language that is intertwined with the roots of the civilization which became dominant in the United States after question of political supremacy had been discussed in French, German, Italian, Spanish and English. It is, in brief, the language of the whole people, the language of the nation."

Some foreign-born citizens may regard this as very unfortunate, as even lamentable in the extreme, but it will be necessary for them to cultivate a philosophical resignation in the presence of the fixed and unchangeable. If they do not like to hear English spoken and shrink from being caught speaking it themselves, the only way for them to find satisfaction is to return to the lands of their birth. There is no escape from the fact that the King James Bible is the American Bible of today and that even our newspaper English is based on the language of Shakespeare. English, with a certain amount of inevitable variation from the original, will remain both the official and the popular language of the United States throughout all time to come, and for those who wish to escape what they appear to consider an outrageous imposition there is, as stated, only one possible course open.

Today's Geographic Study of The Great European War Zone

Central Russia, which lies just before the advancing German lines, was the cradle of the empire, the seat of the Great Russians, and it is today the heart of the greatest state, where are the largest cities of the Slavs and the historic places dearest to the patriots devoted to pan-Slavism," begins the war primer just issued by the National Geographic Society, which deals with the characteristics of the people of the rich, immemorial Slavonian homeland, that the Russians are desperately preparing to defend. "Notwithstanding Kieff's claim to recognition of the study Great Russian stock that one must turn to learn the details as the 'mother of Russian cities,' it is to the story of the empire's building. The Muscovite, or Great Russian, freed the land from the Tartar yoke; subdued many neighboring nations; and, as a good colonizer, peopled the length and breadth of his possessions with his stock.

"Russian history, from the 14th century, centers around 'white-stoned' Moscow, and from this center successive swarms of colonists and pioneers have sought homes in the northern forests, in the fertile southlands, and in far Siberia. Prolific, persevering, patient, persistent in their type, and with astounding reserves of recuperative power, the Muscovites have impressed their government, their faith, language, and their ambitions on the nation, and they, alone of the Slavonians, have created an enduring world power. Today the Great Russians number far more than the White and Little Russians combined, and the Muscovite pioneer carries Great Russia with him wherever he goes. The original of the Great Russian is found in the basin of the River Oka, which joins the Volga at Nishni Novgorod. Here is the most developed and most populous district in all the empire.

"Central Russia is a vast plain, oppressive in its horizons, its sameness of coloring, and in the monotony of its life. It is crossed by great, sluggish rivers, with red banks. Its fields reach to the horizon lines, unfenced, vivid green in spring, greyish-brown in summer, and unbroken white in winter. Its forests are of birch and pine. Its villages are all alike, and all the houses in a village are alike. A village is a straight, abominable street, two rows of houses; a white orthodox church, and a signpost, with the name of the place and its number of 'souls.' In the street are pigs, geese, garbage, and fair-haired children. The huts are simple, and are filled to one-fourth their area by monster white stoves, the first aids to Russian life, in whose ovens the peasants bake and take steam baths, and upon whose upper surface they sleep in winter.

"Although an important manufacture has grown up in Central Russian cities, as in Moscow and Tver, the Great Russians are still primarily an agricultural people. The first choice of the Slav is the working of land. In summer, he and his family work barefoot in the fields; in winter, he banks his hut with earth and straw halfway to the windows, hermetically seals it, and passes an idle, suffocating season in company with his stove, his cattle and his fowls. There is little wonder that his home is generally insect-ridden. The peasants are capable of tremendous energy, though, in the rule, they do not over-rate time's value. They have many delightful virtues, but coupled with a grave tendency to be dishonest. 'Everybody steals,' according to a candid and reckless proverb of their minting, 'except Christ—and He would if His hands were not nailed to the Cross.' In this connection it is only fair to note, that the peasant regards it almost as a righteous thing to 'convey' from the state or from an owner of the the upper classes.

"The peasants possess an infinite appetite for receiving, though thankfulness is not a besetting sin among them. They are tolerant, hospitable and shrewdly practical, and, on the other hand, they are heedless of the modest claims of truth and very imprudent. They have a proverb: 'Beat your wife like your fur, but love her like your soul.' However, Great Russian home life runs a more untroubled course, probably, than in many lands more utterly satisfied with their degree of civilization. When not drunk, the peasant is generally mild, peaceful, and well meaning. When under the inspiration of vodka, he often falls into fearful passions, becoming elemental and carousing. It is upon these peasants of Great Russia that the large part of the duty of defending the fatherland must fall."

JOHN T. TROWBRIDGE IS 88.

Boston, Sept. 18.—John T. Trowbridge, the noted author and poet, today celebrated his eighty-eighth birthday quietly at his home in Arlington. Mr. Trowbridge is in excellent health and remarkably vigorous for a man of his years. His chief regret is that the war has prevented him from taking his customary summer trip to Europe. The venerable poet has crossed the Atlantic a dozen times and hopes to make another trip when the war is ended.

ECONOMY

This is an economical year—nearly everyone is practicing economy, and that very fact has brought more people here than ever before. They have come to realize that to buy on an economical basis does not always mean purchasing at a sale. The quality of the merchandise you buy and the service it gives are as essential to economy as low price. What you buy here is of dependable quality, sure to give the service you have a right to expect. Furthermore, our regular prices are as low as equal goods can be sold for and still give us a legitimate profit. It is our idea to charge as little as we can and give you as much as possible for your money.

Buying our merchandise consistently at regular prices means economy to you in the long run.

ANNOUNCEMENT

We are pleased to announce that return date has been secured with Prof. Joseph Becker, the Chief of world-wide fame who so entertainingly demonstrated his ability on the "GREAT MAJESTIC MALLEABLE and CHARCOAL IRON RANGE," at our store some months ago.

Prof. Becker will be with us again the entire week of October 18th to 23d in a similar demonstration. In order to secure Prof. Becker for this demonstration it was necessary for us to contract with him several months ago, so great is the demand for his services. A great factor in Prof. Becker's success is, that he never demonstrates on any other than a "GREAT MAJESTIC RANGE," of which there are over THREE HUNDRED in use in this community.

We feel sure the ladies of Clearfield will appreciate this return date and any who are thinking of buying a range will wait for this demonstration, when a special representative from the factory together with Prof. Becker will explain how the "GREAT MAJESTIC RANGE" is made, inside and outside. How the oven is heated, how the top is heated. Why the "GREAT MAJESTIC" lasts so long and uses so little fuel. Don't overlook a chance to know things shown by those WHO KNOW.

Watch for our advertisements later, telling of the special set of ware which goes with every "GREAT MAJESTIC" sold during demonstration week.

VIOLENT BATTLE FOR POSSESSION OF VILNA IS ON

Russians May Be Ordered To Leave City If Defenses Are Weakened By Germans

Petrograd Reports Successes in the Southeast to Offset German Victories in Vicinity of Orany.

(By United Press)
Petrograd, Sept. 18.—A violent battle for Vilna has begun. The Germans are attacking a great force east of the city. Several enemy detachments have reached the railway and are attempting to pierce the Russian line.

The official statement from the war office today emphasizes the fact that the fighting around Vilna is the greatest struggle now going on along the Baltic to Galicia battle line. It is not probable that the Czar will order the evacuation of the city within a few days if the enemy's attacks threaten the envelopment of the armies in that region.

German successes in this fighting and in the region southeast of Orany are offset by Russian victories in the southwest. The troops of General Ivanhoff have captured about 3500 prisoners and have occupied three villages, the Austro-Germans at some points fleeing in disorder.

FINALS OF GOLF TOURNEY AT COUNTRY CLUB TODAY

Miss Dyer and Mrs. Shillingford are to Play for Club Cup

The semi-finals of the ladies golf tournament were played off yesterday afternoon. Miss Katharine Dyer, of Curwensville defeated Mrs. Philip Reed, score 3 up and 2 to go. Mrs. Shillingford defeated Miss Marion Bigler, score 5 up. The finals will be played today between Miss Dyer and Mrs. Shillingford.

There were 10 entries for the tournament, the others being Mrs. J. K. Horton, Miss Amelia Bigler, Mrs. A. L. Moore, Mrs. Don Gingery, Mrs. Douglass and Mrs. W. C. Miller.

Gerat interest has been shown in this tournament as well as in the game in general. Prof. Anderson, of Lock Haven, a professional golf player, watched the tournament yesterday and remarked that Clearfield had a very fine club and that there were possibilities to improve the links so as to make them one of the finest in Central Pennsylvania.

Mr. Anderson has been secured to give lessons in the game and he has great hopes of turning out some star players. He is booked for every Friday until the close of the season.

CITY BOARD TO AVERT STRIKES

St. Louis, Sept. 17.—St. Louis will be the first city to establish a permanent municipal industrial dispute commission, if plans now under way do not miscarry. No municipalities in this country have similar bodies, although there is a national commission and several states have similar commissions. The proposal is one of the first important matters scheduled to receive the attention of the board of aldermen, which reassembles tonight for its first session following the summer vacation. The plan is to establish a commission or seven members to arbitrate in labor disputes in an effort to avoid strikes. The mayor would be an ex-officio member, and appoint four other permanent members. In the event of future disputes each side to the controversy would be asked to select a representative to sit with the permanent members and have equal voice with them. The proposed plan is a direct result of the recent success of Father Timothy Dempsey in settling the great teamsters' strike by arbitration.

J. M. Gallaher asks for your vote for Prothonotary. He pledges himself for One Term for One Man. Is that not fair? adv.

Mrs. Andrew Harwick, who has been visiting friends in Huntington for the past fortnight, returned to Clearfield yesterday afternoon. She was accompanied by her cousin Miss Lizzie Thompson, who will spend sometime as her guest.

GERMAN SYSTEM OF ESPIONAGE FINDS MATCH IS ENGLAND

Ten Secret Workers of Kaiser Bagged By Scotland Yard's Efficient Counter

British Authorities Subject All Aliens to Searching Inquiry, Not Lessening Ordeal for Americans (U.S.)

BY WILBUR S. FORREST.
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

London Sept. 6.—(By Mail.)—The admittedly thorough and efficient German spy system is up against a most thorough and efficient stump in England.

One of the unhealthiest obstacles for agents of the enemy's intelligence department is the anti-spy section of Scotland Yard.

Official reports, just issued, show that ten alleged spies of various nationalities, all of whom were declared to be working for Germany, were bagged before any one of them had been in England three weeks. Four had been confessed.

This list, however, represents but a fractional part of the most recent fruits of the British dragnet. On two occasions, it is unofficially declared, the authorities in London cleverly maneuvered to round up dozens of spies who had been operating in London in the guise of British army officers. The method was as simple as it was effective. The war office is said to have informed all army officers in the metropolitan area to refrain on a certain date from traveling on any trains of the great system of underground railways of the metropolis. The order was strictly obeyed. Every officer's uniform that boarded an underground train that day contained a spy. The spy bag was full that night.

Several days later, the war office is said to have repeated its warning, this time instructing officers to keep off the motorbuses that travel by hundreds on London's busiest streets. The result was similar. The spy bag was filled again.

But this is only one of the many methods through which spies are caught in England. Another is chemistry.

It was chemistry that told the British authorities that what appears to be an American passport is not at all the real article. A government chemist informed the authorities that the great and powerful red seal of the American state department had been forged by the enemy; that the secretary of state's signature had been photographed from a genuine American passport in Germany and applied to a spurious document carried later by a spy in England. It was the chemist's proof, linked with other features that followed, that caused the spy to confess that he was furnished the forgery to obtain military secrets in England.

This forgery is today in the hands of the British authorities for comparison with other suspicious looking documents bearing the seal of the United States.

Americans traveling through England to or from continental countries will henceforth be subjected to the most thorough examination and surveillance by the British authorities.

American passports in England, in future, if there is the least doubt of their validity, must bear the tests of the government chemists.

"Americans must not feel ill toward the British authorities if necessary precautions are taken to prevent the use of spurious American passports in this country," said a high official of the war office to the United Press. "They must realize that Germany is not above forging the official seal of the American state department and has, perhaps, forged scores of these documents in an attempt to safe-conduct their spies into England and other belligerent countries. Every American citizen entering England in future must come with a clean bill of health easily proven and above all, with a passport that will defy the analysis of our chemists."

Scotland Yard is assisted in "spy-sleuthing" by all branches of the government and even by the boy scouts and girl scouts.

A striking case of spy detection originated in the general post office where a girl censor had a pronunciation that a certain letter she was reading was "not just right." She handed it over for inspection. A chemical test brought to light writing between the lines of the apparently harmless letter and the trap was set for the spy.

He fell into it a few days later. He was tried and convicted and was executed in London Tower.

A loyal Britisher and his wife from Northern Yorkshire decided to spend a week-end at Torquay, a little watering place near Plymouth on the English southwest. They were "caught" by a boy scout taking a few harmless snapshots of the water-front. The scout reported the incident to the authorities. The Yorkshireman and his wife were immediately arrested. They were proved innocent of spying, without a doubt, but they paid $250.00 as a warning to other "amateur photographers."

The girl scouts serve in the same capacity as the boys. They are helping to make England an unhealthy place for spies.

A RED COURT HOUSE NOT ON YOUR TAX RECEIPT

The Sent of Justice Will be a Modest Buff and Olive, Thank You

Buff and olive! No, it isn't a game. That's the color the court house is going to be when the painters get through with it. Buff walls, and olive-green trimmings.

Red? Never! The young ladies who grace the court house offices would not stand for it. When red was proposed they held a conference and collectively sat upon the idea. The ideal!

Nobody knows just exactly why red was so strongly opposed. It has been suggested that the color didn't match the season's fashions in complexions, or that it didn't give well with the verdant colors in a chintz dress. Whatever it was—and it might have been just "because"—the court house is to be buff and olive.

To The Republican Voters:

I have endeavored to see as many of you as possible. Since entering the campaign for Prothonotary I have worked night and day to meet fact to face the voters of my party. Those of you whom I have met and talked with are in a position to personally pass upon my fitness for the office.

To those of you whom I have not met I desire to say this one more word. I am a native of Clearfield county, as are my parents and grandparents. Our family is one of the older Republican families of the county. I have always been a Republican. I am a graduate of the Clearfield public schools, and have had four years of special work in technical schools. This special work especially qualifies me for the work of the office to which I aspire. I have been employed in the offices of one of the largest manufacturing concerns in this country—in the world in fact.

If you nominate and elect me as Prothonotary of your county I pledge myself absolutely to my platform of One Term for One Man. I will neither ask for nor accept a second term. At the expiration of my term of office I will cheerfully aid some other deserving man to the office.

I hope to have your support. If nominated I will make the same vigorous contest for the election, and after my election will consider it a duty as well as a privilege to assist my party in every way in my power.

If you believe in the second term idea and one man having it all, you will vote for my opponent. If you believe in the One Term for One Man idea, and the passing of the office around I hope you will vote for me.

I respectfully submit my case to your consideration.

Republican Candidate for Prothonotary.

Four, eight twelve years from now—it may be you or it may be your son who asks for the office of Prothonotary. The One Term for One Man established now will work to your, or his, benefit. adv.

Trade Tours Talked About In the Presence of Places Visited

"BUY IT AT HOME" IS WELL RECEIVED

There never was a doubt that Clearfield county welcome to the business men of Clearfield on their tour last week was extremely friendly, but if there had been the expressions contained in current issues of the county newspapers would quickly dispel it.

A rift in the lute is discovered in the neighborhood of Burnside where the Burnside correspondent of the Mahaffey Times finds cause for criticism in the fact that the tourists went to Cherry Tree for their dinner instead of going to some town which doesn't divide the honor of its being between two counties. Burnside felt that the party could have been entertained in Burnside—as well it might have been had the makers of the schedule not thought that better time could be made by going through to Cherry Tree.

McGees Mills also objects to the Cherry Tree dinner party. (It is no longer a secret that the objection is shared by every member of the party who munched the rump and sturgeon served by mine host of the Cherry Tree Inn.) McGees believes that consistency is a whole set of jewelry, and pertinently asks why Clearfield home-trade boosters should find it necessary to go out of the county for a meal.

La Jose was somewhat facetiously inclined, and they saw only the stir among school children which the visit of the boosters caused. La Jose is right about the stir. There was a stir. Later La Jose will see just where the real stir occurred.

Madera expresses her welcome, through the "Herald" which took account of the visit of the business men.

Thus the Coalport "Standard": "Sixty-four of the representative business men of Clearfield stepped in Coalport a short time last Thursday evening on their 'get acquainted' tour of the county. They took supper at the Central. After supper they renewed or got acquainted with some of our business men, and we venture to say should they come again they would meet with a hearty welcome, as they were a mighty fine bunch of gentlemen."

Curwensville, through the "Herald" devotes a good half-column to the visit of the boosters, as follows:

"On September 9 and 10 a number of Clearfield merchants and professional men made tours throughout the county on what they termed a 'Get Together' campaign. The party traveled in automobiles and visited more than a score of towns, greeting the citizens and having an enjoyable time generally."

"Owing to delays the Clearfielders did not reach Curwensville until late Friday night and after taking supper at the hotels they returned to the county seat, well pleased with their experience. The object of the tour was to get acquainted with the people of the county and to show them what a good lot of men are in business in Clearfield."

"The tourists were not after trade, they aver, but to endeavor to induce the people to buy at home, whether it be in Clearfield or some other town in the county. It is likely that these get together tours will be made annual affairs."

The Mahaffey "Times" gives considerable space to the boosters, and takes occasion to express kindly criticism of some of the defects of the tour:

"The Clearfield Chamber of Commerce, represented by almost sixty persons, representing many lines of business, were in Mahaffey on Friday of last week. They arrived here at about 11:00 o'clock, and immediately began to get acquainted. Many of the visitors have souvenirs and printed matter for free distribution."

"From Mahaffey the visitors went to McGees and Burnside. They had arranged to take dinner at the Cherry Tree, but could not find accommodation there for everyone, so half of the party took lunch at La Jose, the remainder going on to Cherry Tree."

"The trade boomers received a warm welcome here, and it is announced that in the near future Mahaffey will gather up her collection of automobiles and make a trip to Clearfield. The motto of our visitors will probably be: 'What you can't buy in Clearfield, but in Mahaffey have the stores to back this up, at least on account of holiday.'

though some of them are a little shy about advertising.

"The only criticism heard here was in connection with the route. It would have been an easy matter to have arranged a stop here for dinner. Mahaffey has two good hotels. A Burnside correspondent also sets forth his views on the subjects in another column.

"These, however, are merely incidental. There were many delightful persons in the boosting party, and the 'keep your dollar at home' propaganda was doubtless strengthened by the visit. Our people need education along the line of sending their good dollars away to mail-order concerns."

STEFFENSON AND PARTY SAFE-WILL CONTINUE SEARCH

Noted Explorer, Thought to be Lost Heard From in the Far North Country

Is Now on Baillie Island and Has Provisions and Ample Oats to Last Party Two Years.

(By United Press)
Ottawa, Sept. 18.—(The message came from Baillie Islands by way of Nome, Alaska, and said that Steffenson planned to continue his northern exploration and has provisions and ample outfit for two years.

The last heard from Steffenson previously was in April, 1914. With the destruction of his first ship the Karluk, greatest fears were felt for the explorer and he had all but been given up for lost.

Baillie Island where Steffenson is now safe and well is in the Arctic ocean at the mouth of the Mackenzie river. As the message refers to plans for further exploration, it is taken for granted that he was entirely unaware of the greatest apprehension for his safety.

Steffenson's expedition sailed in 1912 to discover new lands in the Arctic. A private cable from a member of the Steffenson party received in New York today, said they wintered at Banksland and all were safe.

Can you think of any argument in favor of the second term? adv.

ENGLISH SPEECH IN AMERICA.

The fuller reports of the discussion of the literacy test for voters in New York's constitutional convention show that the defeat of that proposition was due less to the practical politician's influence than to racial antagonisms excited by the issues of the European war. Such a test would have temporarily disfranchised thousands of foreign-born voters in the metropolis and for this reason both Republican and Democrats politicians opposed the change, but the accounts indicate that the measure would have been adopted but for anti-English feeling aroused by speakers who incautiously contended that if a literacy test in the English language were not provided "our Anglo-Saxon institutions and Anglo-Saxon civilization would be endangered."

After this, apparently, there was no hope, and a measure which was at first adopted by a vote of 70 to 61, was defeated by a vote of 77 to 67, owing, according to one account, to "the fatal weakness, in the opinion of the majority of the convention, of requiring that the voter should be able to read and write in English." One delegate declared that a literacy test in the English language would be an "insult" to a million residents of the metropolis. He stated, however, that he would accept a literacy test if the word "English" were stricken out, but did not say whether he preferred to substitute German or Yiddish. Doubtless Mr. Max Fast, had he been a delegate, would not have stopped short of an offered substitution, for, in speaking to the German-American society of Bergen County, N. J., recently, he asked pardon for "speaking in English" and a member recommended that he "say American language instead of English." Noting the curious fact that New York "could not fix upon a domestic policy of moment without fighting out the issues which divide Europe," the Springfield Republican pointedly remarks:

"What is the position in this country of the English language? It is the language of the federal constitution, the language of congress and every state legislature, the language of the courts, the language in which all laws, federal and state, are printed. It is the language in which all American literature has been written. It is the language of Washington and Lincoln, of the Farewell Address, the emancipation proclamation and the address at Gettysburg. It is the language of commerce and trade. It is the language of politics. It is the one language that is intertwined with the roots of the civilization which became dominant in the United States after question of political supremacy had been discussed in French, German, Italian, Spanish and English. It is, in brief, the language of the whole people, the language of the nation."

Some foreign-born citizens may regard this as very unfortunate, as even lamentable in the extreme, but it will be necessary for them to cultivate a philosophical resignation in the presence of the fixed and unchangeable. If they do not like to hear English spoken and shrink from being caught speaking it themselves, the only way for them to find satisfaction is to return to the lands of their birth. There is no escape from the fact that the King James Bible is the American Bible of today and that even our newspaper English is based on the language of Shakespeare. English, with a certain amount of inevitable variation from the original, will remain both the official and the popular language of the United States throughout all time to come, and for those who wish to escape what they appear to consider an outrageous imposition there is, as stated, only one possible course open.

Today's Geographic Study of The Great European War Zone

Central Russia, which lies just before the advancing German lines, was the cradle of the empire, the seat of the Great Russians, and it is today the heart of the greatest state, where are the largest cities of the Slavs and the historic places dearest to the patriots devoted to pan-Slavism," begins the war primer just issued by the National Geographic Society, which deals with the characteristics of the people of the rich, immemorial Slavonian homeland, that the Russians are desperately preparing to defend. "Notwithstanding Kieff's claim to recognition of the study Great Russian stock that one must turn to learn the details as the 'mother of Russian cities,' it is to the story of the empire's building. The Muscovite, or Great Russian, freed the land from the Tartar yoke; subdued many neighboring nations; and, as a good colonizer, peopled the length and breadth of his possessions with his stock.

"Russian history, from the 14th century, centers around 'white-stoned' Moscow, and from this center successive swarms of colonists and pioneers have sought homes in the northern forests, in the fertile southlands, and in far Siberia. Prolific, persevering, patient, persistent in their type, and with astounding reserves of recuperative power, the Muscovites have impressed their government, their faith, language, and their ambitions on the nation, and they, alone of the Slavonians, have created an enduring world power. Today the Great Russians number far more than the White and Little Russians combined, and the Muscovite pioneer carries Great Russia with him wherever he goes. The original of the Great Russian is found in the basin of the River Oka, which joins the Volga at Nishni Novgorod. Here is the most developed and most populous district in all the empire.

"Central Russia is a vast plain, oppressive in its horizons, its sameness of coloring, and in the monotony of its life. It is crossed by great, sluggish rivers, with red banks. Its fields reach to the horizon lines, unfenced, vivid green in spring, greyish-brown in summer, and unbroken white in winter. Its forests are of birch and pine. Its villages are all alike, and all the houses in a village are alike. A village is a straight, abominable street, two rows of houses; a white orthodox church, and a signpost, with the name of the place and its number of 'souls.' In the street are pigs, geese, garbage, and fair-haired children. The huts are simple, and are filled to one-fourth their area by monster white stoves, the first aids to Russian life, in whose ovens the peasants bake and take steam baths, and upon whose upper surface they sleep in winter.

"Although an important manufacture has grown up in Central Russian cities, as in Moscow and Tver, the Great Russians are still primarily an agricultural people. The first choice of the Slav is the working of land. In summer, he and his family work barefoot in the fields; in winter, he banks his hut with earth and straw halfway to the windows, hermetically seals it, and passes an idle, suffocating season in company with his stove, his cattle and his fowls. There is little wonder that his home is generally insect-ridden. The peasants are capable of tremendous energy, though, in the rule, they do not over-rate time's value. They have many delightful virtues, but coupled with a grave tendency to be dishonest. 'Everybody steals,' according to a candid and reckless proverb of their minting, 'except Christ—and He would if His hands were not nailed to the Cross.' In this connection it is only fair to note, that the peasant regards it almost as a righteous thing to 'convey' from the state or from an owner of the the upper classes.

"The peasants possess an infinite appetite for receiving, though thankfulness is not a besetting sin among them. They are tolerant, hospitable and shrewdly practical, and, on the other hand, they are heedless of the modest claims of truth and very imprudent. They have a proverb: 'Beat your wife like your fur, but love her like your soul.' However, Great Russian home life runs a more untroubled course, probably, than in many lands more utterly satisfied with their degree of civilization. When not drunk, the peasant is generally mild, peaceful, and well meaning. When under the inspiration of vodka, he often falls into fearful passions, becoming elemental and carnivorous. It is upon these peasants of Great Russia that the large part of the duty of defending the fatherland must fall."

JOHN T. TROWBRIDGE IS 88.

Boston, Sept. 18.—John T. Trowbridge, the noted author and poet, today celebrated his eighty-eighth birthday quietly at his home in Arlington. Mr. Trowbridge is in excellent health and remarkably vigorous for a man of his years. His chief regret is that the war has prevented him from taking his customary summer trip to Europe. The venerable poet has crossed the Atlantic a dozen times and hopes to make another trip when the war is ended.

ECONOMY

This is an economical yet—nearly everyone is practicing economy, and that very fact has brought more people here than ever before. They have come to realize that to buy on an economical basis does not always mean purchasing at a sale. The quality of the merchandise you buy and the service it gives are as essential to economy as low price. What you buy here is of dependable quality, sure to give the service you have a right to expect. Furthermore, our regular prices are as low as equal goods can be sold for and still give us a legitimate profit. It is our idea to charge as little as we can and give you as much as possible for your money.

Buying our merchandise consistently at regular prices means economy to you in the long run.

ANNOUNCEMENT

We are pleased to announce that return date has been secured with Prof. Joseph Becker, the Chief of world-wide fame who so entertainingly demonstrated his ability on the "GREAT MAJESTIC MALLEABLE and CHARCOAL IRON RANGE," at our store some months ago.

Prof. Becker will be with us again the entire week of October 18th to 23d in a similar demonstration. In order to secure Prof. Becker for this demonstration it was necessary for us to contract with him several months ago, so great is the demand for his services. A great factor in Prof. Becker's success is, that he never demonstrates on any other than a "GREAT MAJESTIC RANGE," of which there are over THREE HUNDRED in use in this community.

We feel sure the ladies of Clearfield will appreciate this return date and any who are thinking of buying a range will wait for this demonstration, when a special representative from the factory together with Prof. Becker will explain how the "GREAT MAJESTIC RANGE" is made, inside and outside. How the oven is heated, how the top is heated. Why the "GREAT MAJESTIC" lasts so long and uses so little fuel. Don't overlook a chance to know things shown by those WHO KNOW.

Watch for our advertisements later, telling of the special set of ware which goes with every "GREAT MAJESTIC" sold during demonstration week.

Lesson XII.—Third Quarter, For Sept. 19, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, 1 Kings xx, 10-21. Memory Verses, 11, 12—Golden Text, Matt. iv, 11—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

This is chosen as a lesson against intemperance because of the drunkenness of Ben-hadad and the thirty-two kings who are said to have helped him, all of whom were drinking themselves drunk in the pavilions (verses 12, 16), and were thus more easily overcome by the small army of Israel. In our own day railroad and other corporations are learning that men who are given to strong drink cannot be relied upon and that it is not the part of wisdom to employ them, no matter how efficient they may be. Not only does such an and folly take away the heart or understanding, as in the golden text, but it is apt to become most filthy and beastly and has been known to affect even priests and prophets (Isa. xxviii, 7, 8). It is utterly selfish and sensual and turns the heart away from the Lord (Isa. v, 11, 12, 20-23). Neither drunkards nor any other unrighteous people can inherit the kingdom of God, but there is forgiveness and salvation for all sinners who truly turn to the Lord and honestly receive the Lord Jesus Christ (1 Cor. vi, 9-11). The contrast to being drunk with wine is to be filled with the Spirit (Eph. v, 18), and this is the privilege of all believers. The insanity of drunkenness, with its insatiable selfishness and cruel appropriation of the property of others, is seen in the demands of Ben-hadad upon Ahab for his silver and gold, wives and children and everything pleasant in his home and the homes of his servants (verses 1-6), and yet strong drink has done and is doing just that in numberless homes today. When the Lord is rejected and any other ruler installed it is always a matter of taking, take all that one has (1 Sam. viii, 10-18). How great the contrast to God, who giveth life and health and all things, who gave His only begotten Son, and to Him like eternal and glory and all things freely (John xvi, 26; John iii, 16; 2, 28; xvii, 26; Rom. viii, 32). How desperately wicked and cruel the devil must be to blind people to the love of God, who giveth all things, that he may take all they have for time and eternity (II Cor. iv, 3, 4).

There is something more and deeper and far-reaching in this lesson chapter than the story of drunken Ben-hadad, whom God had appointed to utter destruction (verse 42) because of his sins. Ahab, king of Israel, was about as bad as a man could be, under the influence of his wicked wife, Jezebel, and yet for Israel's sake, for Israel was his people, though in rebellion against him. He gave Ahab victory over Ben-hadad and his associates twice, although Israel's forces were like two little flocks of kids, while the Syrians filled the country (verse 27). He did this that Ahab might know him as the true God instead of Baal, whom he worshipped to please his wife (verses 13, 25). By this great goodness He would if possible lead Ahab to repentance, for He is not willing that any should perish (Rom. ii, 4; II Pet. iii, 9). Three times in this lesson the Lord sent special messengers to Ahab, twice to encourage him and once to reprove him (verses 13, 28, 38). At the first victory Israel slew the Syrians with a great slaughter, but they came again, saying, "We were defeated because the gods of Israel are the gods of the hills; therefore we will fight against them in the plain and surely overcome them." Because they talked thus the Lord said by His second messenger that He would deliver this great multitude of Syrians into Ahab's hands, and so Israel slew 10,000 footmen of the Syrians in one day, and a wall fell upon 27,000 more and killed them, but Ben-hadad made his escape and hid in an inner chamber (verses 28-30).

The king of Syria's servants planned a scheme by which they might learn if Ahab was inclined to be merciful to him and spare him. Ahab called him "my brother" and said, "Go ye, bring him," so they met and made a covenant one with the other (verses 31-34). This led to the Lord's sending a third messenger with a reproof for Ahab because he had spared Ben-hadad, and "the king of Israel went to his house heavy and displeased (verse 43). We are reminded of Saul sparing Agag and also the best of the sheep and oxen, and also of the Lord's message by Samuel, "Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice" (1 Sam. xv, 9, 22).

In last week's lesson we saw Jezebel possessed by the devil, and now we see two men with the same trouble. Ben-hadad and Ahab, and yet the Lord would have used Ahab had he been willing, but he preferred a compromise with the king of Syria rather than faithfulness to the God of Israel who had given him two such wonderful victories. So it is still, the mighty God, the God of Jacob, is ready to hold strongly with all whose hearts are whole toward Him (II Chron. xvi, 9, margin), but many professed servants of the Lord prefer to be friendly with some Ben-hadad rather than be faithful to God and rebuke their sin. "Busy here and there" (verse 40) with many things that are not of God describes the life of many a preacher, and rather compromise with certain wrong things because of the standing of the persons who do them than rebuke the wrong.

PRESIDENT IS TO WIG-WAG MESSAGE TO THE VETERANS

Members of Civil War Signal Corps Arrange Unique Ceremony for the Review

Old Fashioned Signal Apparatus Will be Borrowed From National Museum for the Purpose.

Washington, Sept. 17.—On the opening day of the forthcoming grand army encampment in Washington President Wilson will "wig wag" a message of greeting and good will to the veterans visiting the national capital. Mr. Wilson will not personally manipulate the flags for he does not understand the old Myer code which was in use by the union army during the civil war, but his welcome will be translated into the sign language and sent from station to station about Washington by survivors of the signal corps of fifty years ago.

Arrangement for the signaling features of the encampment were announced today by Lieut. George Carr Round, president of the U. S. Veterans Signal Corps Association, who has called upon all members of the organization who are able to do so to be present in Washington during encampment week. The main station of the signal corps boys of '64-'65 will be upon the heights of Georgetown in the extreme western section of Washington and upon the very spot where the government had its signal camps of instruction during the war. Mt. Tabor Methodist church stands there now and it will be used as the headquarters of the corps. From that point welcomes will be "wig-waged" by such signal corps officers as General Fisher, General Greely, General Scriven and Col. Albert J. Myers, Jr. These officers understand the code will doubtless take the flags in their own hands and do their own signaling, flashing messages of peace and good will to the American people. At various points about Washington such as Fort Stevens, Fort De Russy, the Soldiers Home, Fort Richardson and Fairfax Seminary which were used as signaling points in war times, stations will be established during the encampment and messages will be transmitted in the old way as in the days before the invention of the field telephone and the wireless. Instead of being war orders they will be what President Round of the Signal Corps Association calls "jubilee messages." The scheme was tried with much success during the encampment at Chattanooga and Gettysburg, and will be worked out upon a much more elaborate basis for encampment week in Washington. Another feature will be the transmission of orders by the old "wig-wag" method during the time the veterans are passing in parade in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the grand review. men will be stationed in the dome of capitol and on top of the treasury at the west end of Pennsylvania avenue and from time to time as the old veterans are passing in review messages will be sent.

President Round has been obliged to scour the country for a set of old time copper torches which will be used in a "wig-waging" welcomes to the grand army on the night of the big reception. The station used on that occasion will be the dome of the capitol. "As none of these old torches has been preserved by the signal office of the army, it probable that the set provided will finally be presented to the National Museum as relics.

HIGH LIFE FOR CHICKENS

(By United Press)

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 17.—Oak Cliff has added a chicken cabaret to its night life.

City influences are blamed. The country chicken hunts its roost fully half an hour before twilight, and stays there. But the poultry inhabitants of Oak Cliff have scandalized the little suburb with their nocturnal carryings on.

A curiosity seeking chancier of a hitherto sedate family of Rhode Island Reds is blamed for the great change in feathered domestic circles. Peeping through the window of his roostroom a few nights ago, he was amazed to discover that the yard and street were as brightly illumined as in the day. Street cars rumbled past, automobiles chugged up the hill, the neighbor's collie trotted out to meet pedestrians, and cats yowled and scampered along the fences. All this was life to the chancier. He hopped from his perch and joined the throng.

Out in the bright light at the corner, that rooster found a wonderful supply of dainties. "The very neighbors of the most delicate bugs had ever tasted. The next night the whole family adjourned to the corner. The news spread to other chicken houses. Now every night sees a great assemblage of feathered rounders devouring bugs, promenading and chattering in the moonlight.

NEW TEACHING IS HELPFUL, MAKING YOUNG CITIZENS

Community Civics Proved to be Valuable Adjunct to the School Curriculum

Teaches Youth the Value, Duty and Responsibility of Citizenship, and Fits it for Duties in Life.

"Community civics helps the child to know the meaning of his community life, not merely a lot of facts about it," says a bulletin, just issued by the U. S. Bureau of Education. This bulletin was prepared by four members of the committee on social studies of the National Education Association—Dr. J. Lynn Barnard, School of Pedagogy, Philadelphia; F. W. Carrier, principal of Wilmington Mass., high school; Arthur W. Dunn, specialists in civic education, U. S. Bureau of Education; and Clarence D. Kingsley, of the Massachusetts board of education.

"The significance of the term 'community civics' does not lie in its geographical implications," says the bulletin, "but applies this point of view to the national community as well. Emphasis is laid upon the local community because it is the one with which every child comes in contact. It is easier for him to enter into actual co-operation with his neighbors than with the nation as a whole."

The authors of the bulletin make clear that the term "citizenship" is used broadly. The "good citizen," they say, "is a person who habitually conducts himself with proper regard for the welfare of the community of which he is a member and is active and intelligent in his co-operation with his fellow members to that end."

Community civics, according to the bulletin, should be taught in the elementary grades of the public schools and should be continued in a more comprehensive course in the first year of the high school. "Many pupils do not enter high school at all, and those who do should already have begun to acquire habits of civic thought and action. The greater maturity of the high school pupil makes possible the development of phases of the subject that are impracticable in the elementary school."

"Many courses in civics fail," the authors think, "because they fix attention upon the machinery of government rather than upon the elements of community welfare for which which government exists. They familiarize the pupil with the manipulation of the social machinery without showing him the importance of the social ends for which this machinery exists. A lesson in community civics is not complete unless it leaves with the pupil a sense of his responsibility, and results in right action. To attain these ends is perhaps the most difficult and delicate task of the teacher."

"Much civic instruction," declares the bulletin, "has been ineffective because it has left the pupil to work out for himself the application of general principles. The translation of principles into conduct is more difficult than the comprehension of the principles themselves. While we urge that the citizen should engage in these activities as far as opportunity offers, it is necessary to cultivate a motive sufficiently strong to lead him actually to do so. This motive is to be found in the common interest, which includes his interest, at least until such time as an ideal altruism may lead to the placing of the interest of others and of the community above the interest of self."

FOUR GOVERNORS TAKE PART
(By United Press)
Sacramento, Cal., Sept. 17.—Governors of four states are here today to address the International Irrigation congress which opened today. The executives who will speak are Boyle of Nevada, McDonald, of New Mexico, Carlson of Colorado and Alexander of Idaho. Governor Johnson of California is acting as host.

Nearly 2,000 delegates are here to attend the congress. Nearly every state in the union and most of the provinces of Canada are represented. The last session of the congress will be held in San Francisco September 20.

CLEARFIELD FIREMEN PAY HIGH TRIBUTE TO KLINE

Endorse Him For County Treasurer at Recent Meeting

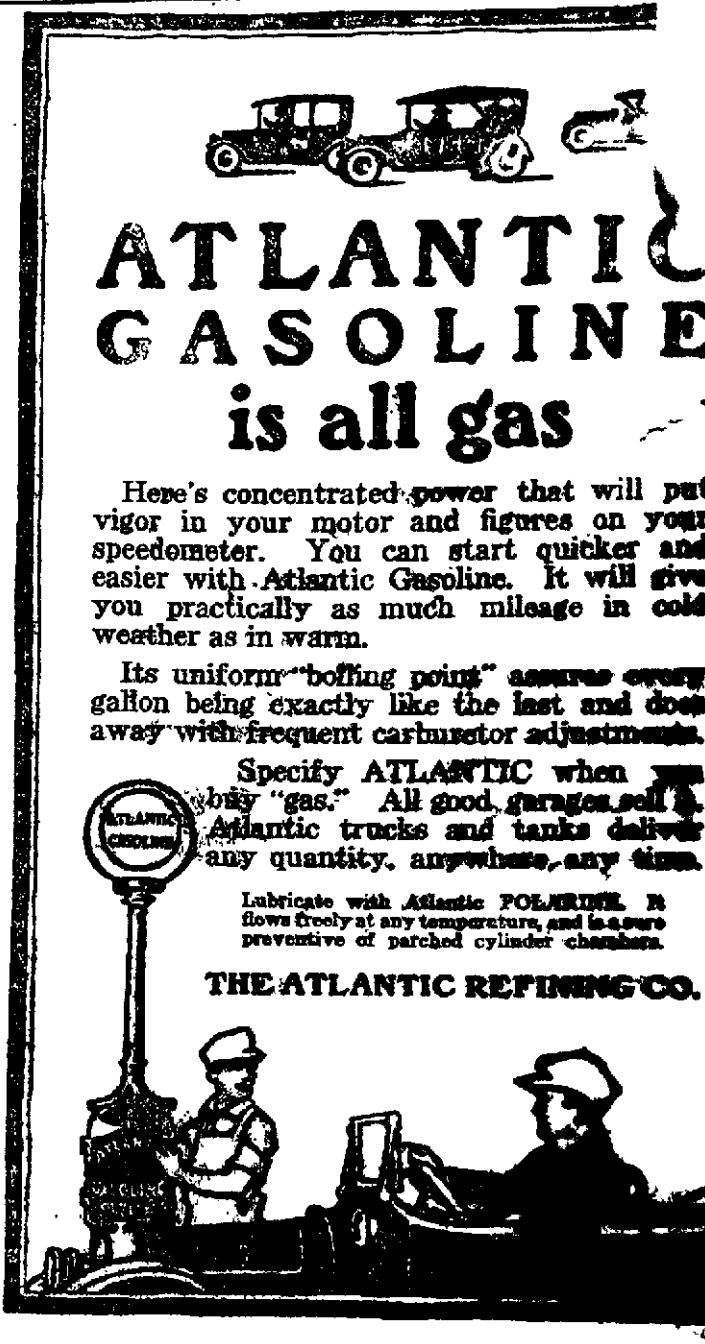

Al Kline, the popular Clearfield business man, who is a candidate for the office of county treasurer on the Republican ticket, received a warm endorsement from the Firemen of Clearfield at a recent meeting of that organization. Recognizing his sterling worth, the Firemen pledged themselves to vote for Mr. Kline at the primaries, and to give him their undivided support should he win the nomination next week. This endorsement was entirely unsolicited by Mr. Kline, and is a distinct compliment to him which may serve as a guide to the voters of the county who may want to know how he stands in his own home town. Mr. Kline is the only one of the 56 candidates now in the field who has been similarly honored.

Mr. Kline stands for a straight business administration of the county's affairs. A successful business man himself, he is qualified in every respect for the position to which he aspires, and will render efficient honest and loyal service to the county if he is elected.

GOOD-BYE STRAW HATS.

(By United Press)
Dayton, Sept. 18.—Forty thousand straw hats will go up in smoke tonight, when the retail merchant board will open the annual fall style show here. For the past week city and rural boys have been sneaking fathers' hats to the big pile.

W. G. Brown, candidate for county treasurer, Republican ticket, believes the people should settle the saloon question and not the politician. * * *

The Best Range at the Right Price
The Aluminum Cooking Ware FREE

ONE CENT A MEAL FOR ONE YEAR.

In almost every house there are practically one thousand meals a year prepared on the stove. Many people hesitate about paying five or ten dollars more to secure a reliable range—one that will cook these thousand meals a year with the least trouble and at the lowest cost. If you should add one cent to the cost of every meal for the first year only, you would soon make up the difference between the cheap range and the range that will last a lifetime.

Suppose your cheap range uses one cent's more of fuel in cooking each meal, or only three cents' worth more a day. In one year this range has cost you ten dollars extra—ten dollars more for fuel than the better range. Every year means that much more money burned up.

Suppose the better range does cost ten dollars more at first than the cheap one. The extra cost is nothing—it amounts to only one cent a meal. It will save you one cent a meal in fuel alone. In one year it will save the extra cost, and in ten years it will save you one hundred dollars, not counting what you save missing big repair bills.

You can open a bank account in your kitchen by buying a South Bend Malleable Range. An expert demonstrator from the factory will be at our store for one week. He will tell you about the Patented Aluminum-Fused Copper-Bearing Flues. And prove to you why it is the best range made.
